NEWS OR THE ROCKAWAYS.

H. Richter & Co. sold at Rockaway. L. I. for James G. Callaghan a plot on 142d street; for Edward Swinney, a larger than the proposed construction of required. The first practice the association sought to stop by the exchange of information on the specific work contracts and the second by having its own impectors estimate the quantity of cement required for a given piece of work.

Miss Phalen said that in one year it was found that orders for 2,700,000 barrels had been ordered from the mills in excess of the requirements.

Mr. Cox sought to show that the Federal Trade Commission had made no objection to the practices of the association, although it had complete statements of the activities in letters furnished it in December, 1917.

The trial will be continued this morning.
